

About Michael Island

My name is Michael Island. I'm a writer, artist, publisher, sports admirer, music lover, TV addict, selfish "bastard" and hopeless defender of the conceptual realm.

I'm not a liberal, a conservative or a progressive because I believe strictly in constitutionally-limited government and I reject their central tenets of religion, democracy, egalitarianism, pragmatism, "civil" rights, welfare, taxation, public property and more. Unfortunately, I'm not a libertarian, either. I have moral principles which I refuse to barter, compromise or sacrifice for momentary social or political power.

I'm an independent, an egoist and an individualist. I'm a radical capitalist living by and advocating an ethical ideology without political representation. Politically, I stand for individual rights and not much else, beyond the obvious need of a government to defend and protect these rights.

The primary purpose of my work is to challenge our intellectually bankrupt culture and hopefully change minds on the fundamental issue which I think determines the ultimate course of civilization: egoism versus altruism. However, I'm also obsessed with self-education and the communication of ideas, so on the practical level I tend to focus on producing, evaluating and appreciating popular art and other media.

I don't think of myself as an aggressive activist, but I do believe fully in expressing my beliefs and my logical right to them. So you should only follow me if you share my interests or enjoy challenging your intelligence. I hope you do...

About This Article

"About Michael Island" was written by Michael Island on June 16th, 2017. It is available for reuse under a Creative Commons Public Domain Dedication, which means it may be freely altered, distributed and republished without legal restriction.

Individuals Matter

<https://michaelisland.me/>